German-West African Centre for Global Health and Pandemic Prevention

G-WAC CALL FOR APPLICATIONS

Three Months Research Stay at KNUST in 2023

Background

The German-West African Centre for Global Health and Pandemic Prevention (G-WAC) is hosted by the College of Health Sciences, Kwame Nkrumah University of Science and Technology (KNUST), Kumasi, Ghana. The Centre collaborates with the Technical University Berlin, Charité-University of Medicine Berlin and University of Bonn, Germany.

The Centre aims to address the existential threat of pandemics to the health and welfare of people through trans- and inter-disciplinary research projects targeting both the main drivers of pandemics (e.g. health impact of wild habitat encroachment, extensive agriculture and climate change, transfer of pathogens from wild animals to humans) and the key pillars of resilient health systems in the WHO framework (e.g. effective governance, sustainable financing mechanisms, appropriate human resource capacity, availability of essential medicines and technology, reliable health information, and responsive health service delivery) using One Health approaches.

G-WAC invites Researchers and PhD candidates to apply towards conducting research in the following thematic areas as part of a 3-month research stay at any of the schools/faculties within the College of Health Sciences at KNUST:

- » Bacteriology & Parasitology
- » Community Engagement & Social Sciences
- » Epidemiology and Surveillance
- » Digital health
- » Health Systems & Health Economics
- » Virology and Diagnostics
- » Zoonoses
